

The urban history of the North A PhD-student Workshop

Institute of Urban History
Stockholm

Call for paper

The Institute of Urban History at Stockholm University invites PhD students to a workshop about the urban history of the Northern countries since the Middle Ages. That refers to Denmark, Finland, Norway, Sweden, and Iceland. The workshop will take place on April 10–11, 2025, at Stockholm University.

The aim of the workshop is to give postgraduate students, currently researching some aspect of the urban history of the North, the opportunity to present and discuss their ongoing research. The workshop concerns all aspects of the urban history of the North preferably in a comparative and trans-disciplinary perspective. We are looking for participants from a variety of disciplines, such as all fields of history, ethnology, archaeology, cultural geography, environmental studies, sociology, political science, architecture, art history, etc.

If you are interested in participating, please submit an abstract, no longer than 2500 characters, describing the main features of your ongoing doctoral research. Notification of acceptance will be sent by February 15, 2025, at the latest.

The Institute will cover expenses for all participants, including travel and accommodation, if these costs cannot be accommodated by your home university.

A detailed program with your abstracts will be sent out before the conference. Listeners are welcome in case of empty seats. The number of participants is limited to about 25.

The deadline for abstract submission is January 31, 2025.

Send your abstract to: heiko.droste@historia.su.se

Welcome!
